

Talk to a Real Person, Not a Robot

airfaresupport.com is an independent resource that helps travellers skip the phone-tree maze and reach an actual human at the world's biggest airlines and travel sites. This deck covers four of our most-read "talk to a real person" guides — one airline per slide — each linking straight through to the full guide.

www.airfaresupport.com

AIRLINE SUPPORT

Talk to a Real Person at Icelandair

Icelandair's automated line handles routine bookings fine, but a misconnected stopover in Reykjavik or a weather-hit itinerary needs an actual agent.

There's a specific menu sequence that routes you past the bot faster, plus the hours when U.S. and European callers see the shortest hold times.

We also cover Icelandair's live-chat and social-media desks for travellers who'd rather skip the phone entirely.

Read Full Guide →

BOOKING PLATFORM SUPPORT

Talk to a Real Person at Expedia

Because Expedia bundles flights, hotels and cars from different providers, its support routing depends on exactly what you booked.

Our guide separates the flight-only line from the package and hotel lines, so you're not stuck explaining your issue twice.

It also flags when it's actually faster to contact the airline directly instead of going through Expedia at all.

Read Full Guide →

AIRLINE SUPPORT

Talk to a Real Person at Asiana Airlines

Asiana's support desk splits by region, and calling the wrong number from outside Korea can mean a long wait for very little help.

We list the correct international numbers, the English-language support hours, and the online form that gets a real reply within days.

For baggage and refund issues specifically, there's a faster dedicated channel most flyers never find on their own.

Read Full Guide →

AIRLINE SUPPORT

Talk to a Real Person at Qantas Airways

Qantas runs separate support lines for domestic Australian travel versus international routes, and mixing the two adds unnecessary hold time.

The guide breaks down the callback-request feature, which skips the queue entirely for non-urgent questions.

Frequent Flyer members also get a priority line — we explain how to find it and what counts as a qualifying issue.

Read Full Guide →

AIRFARESUPPORT

@

support@airfaresupport.com

W

www.airfaresupport.com

+

Skyline Plaza, 5th Floor, 123 Main Street, Los Angeles, California 90001, USA

Thank you